

Beers and Vibrators, What Do They Possibly Have in Common?

Vibrators, there are so many. How do you know where to start? Does a person really need one or two or... Well do you really need a beer while watching the game on TV? Hey, it is about enhancing the experience to make it the most enjoyable, so make the most of it. No one is to be intimidated, just open-minded. Guys like porn magazines, girls like cutzie pretty colored vibrating toys. And it is even better when your partner is there to do the driving for you.

Women are usually harder to reach orgasm than men are, which means more time and effort. Throw in some good multi tasking, and no stopping, it may take 20 plus minutes. Then once woman start to orgasm, don't stop. The initial hard part is over but women can keep coming for about another hour with minimal effort and only less than a minute breaks in-between. Why not enhance your experience too and have a little help from your friends. Yes, toys should be a man's best friend. A play item or two, just like lubricant can make things sooo much easier and is very effective for everyone.

You can get a little one called the Lifesaver, a slim 4 inches of firm plastic that is not intimidating to anyone, great for external or internal (on both openings). Feels good on the man too. Then there are the jelly coated vibrators such as the Red Devil (food grade jelly, like your storage containers), they are softer and quieter and come in all inches and girths. Then you can get the G-spot vibes that have the curved shape at the end, this curved part is meant to point upwards facing the belly button when inside to put firm pressure on the G-spot, again another area needing multi minutes of stimulation to activate....but well worth the efforts. Some women can have gusher orgasms releasing up to a liter of fluid. A favorite is the Shayla La Veaux Slimline G-spot Kit. This is a perfect G-spot vibe (the clitoris loves it too) as well as it has many other great benefits as it reaches all the hard to get spots and even works as a great back massager when alone. Then you have the vibrators that give you a "blended" orgasm; a g-spot and clitoral orgasm together. A good basic starter is the Orgasmic Beaver. The cadillac of all vibrators is the Decadent Indulgence, drive her wild,,,does 100 speed patterns. It will continuously hit the G-spot as the tip rotates around and around, and the rotating ball bearing in the shaft will help work her PC muscle (squeeze muscle) for your tight ride too. Then a clitoral stimulator out the side of it, but this one has wings so it also stimulates her inner and outer lips (aka- The Hummingbird). Vibrators are made of many other materials that have different textures and densities such as; Silicone, Ultra Realistic, or Cyberskin.

When using any toys and for that fact your finger, penis, mouth etc, you should use lubricant for an enhanced sensation. Things will glide much easier, feel way more heightened and not dry up and give a rug burn irritation. Lubrication is a must in the bedroom, no need to spit every other minute. There are hundreds of them; either get a water-based type like O' My (uses natural ingredients such as hemp seed oil and has a convenient easy-lock pump lid) or a super slippery silicone type like ID Millennium (still condom and toy compatible, hard to go back to others after you use silicone based). Clean your toys before and after use, Safe Suds or most any brand toy cleaner will work. You just need only to spray it on and wipe off with a damp cloth so no running water is required that may leak into the battery area.

As there are many different flavors to discover with the numerous beers, there is a much variety and pleasure in the world of vibrators, so have fun with you market research. Give her a ride of her life and be the road king!
